High Alert

WRH continues to exercise increased vigilance and screening due to the North American H1N1 (Swine Flu) outbreak. As a result, staff may find some entrances closed in order to keep traffic to main entrances. At the Western Campus tower, staff and visitors will need to enter via the main entrance. For the time being, the Casgrain entrance will not be open. At the Met Campus, staff are asked to continue to use the main entrance. At various entrances, security and other staff may be asking questions to assist in screening for symptoms. This may cause some delays - everyone is asked to be cooperative, patient and understanding at this time.

The goal of SAAM is to raise public awareness about sexual violence (focusing on sexual assault and rape) and to educate communities and individuals on how to prevent sexual violence. 'Respect Works!' is a new slogan that highlights the role that respectful behavior, at both the individual and organizational levels, can play in creating and maintaining safe and healthy communities and workplaces.
