CURATIVE RADIATION TREATMENTS BACK TO FULL CAPACITY AT WINDSOR REGIONAL HOSPITAL CANCER CENTRE

Windsor Regional Hospital (WRH) with IT experts, radiation treatment platform providers and its expert WRH clinical staff has been able to safely resume full operation of curative radiation treatments as part of the overall IT restoration plan.

We will continue to be working with other cancer centres that supported us during this difficult time and the individual patients who have been referred to other centres. It will be in the best interest of patients to start and complete their radiation treatment at the centres they have been referred to both for clinical continuity and to avoid any additional delays.

We want to thank these organizations for their support in assisting with our patients. Financial support continues to be available for travel and accommodation costs.

In parallel, patients requiring systemic (chemotherapy and related services) are being treated both within WRH, and plans have been established to access additional capacity in other centres, if needed. Any referrals to any other centres requires the referral first to be made to the Windsor Regional Hospital Cancer Centre to ensure seamless clinical care and appropriate coordination.

WRH fully appreciates the stress all of this has caused to our patients but want to thank our community for their support while we continue to address the fallout from these criminal acts.
